

Receiving German Ambassador, Sayyid Ammar Al Hakim Asserts that the Return of Displaced Families to their Freed Regions is Better than their

Sayyid Ammar Al Hakim, head of the Islamic Supreme Council of Iraq, asserted that the return of displaced families to their homes and freed regions is better than their stay in camps, praising the constructive role played by the popular crowd combatants in facilitating the return of displaced families to the liberated regions after ISIS was forced out.

This came when Sayyid Ammar Al Hakim received at his office in Baghdad His Excellency the Ambassador of Germany to Iraq Mr. Ikhard Broza on Monday, 3/8/2015.

For his part, the German Ambassador lauded the visions and rationality of Sayyid Ammar Al Hakim and his positive relationships with the rest of Iraqi national blocs, highlighting the broad positive extents of his eminence's approach among the Iraqi people and the great respect that the international community has towards this open and moderate approach, especially that it serves the security, stability, prosperity and the regional and international relations of Iraq. The two sides also discussed the general developments in the country.