

Sayyid Ammar al-Hakim Visits the Injured of the Military Operations and Underscores That Their resolve is an Evidence of Iraq's Victory

Sayyid Ammar al-Hakim, head of the Islamic Supreme Council of Iraq, praised the high spirit of the people injured during military operations, noting that their resolve is an impeccable evidence that the Iraqis are victors, and that they will face terrorism and build their country.

This came during his visit to army, police, and sons of the tribes injured in the military operations in the city of Medicine in Baghdad on Friday September 25, 2015. Sayyid Ammar al-Hakim showed that the presence of injured from various affiliations proves that Iraqis are united against terrorism and that it targets them all in spite of the difficult economic situation of Iraq, calling for more care for the people injured, and valuing at the same time the efforts of the medical staffs in the Ministry of Health, which are sparing no effort to take care of the sacrificers.
