Sayyid Ammar al-Hakim, Head of the Islamic Supreme Council, called the affluent class to help the popular mobilization forces and the families of the martyrs, noting that the value of the human being is not in what he owns but with his relationship with the Almighty. This came on the third night of the commemoration of Imam Hussein (pbuh) that was held at His Eminence's office in Baghdad on Friday 16/10/2015.

Sayyid al-Hakim stressed on the importance of working by the advice and listening to him, pointing out that islam divided people into classes and expressed the need of one class into other classes and saved the role of the poor people for they have always been the entrepreneurs. His Eminence also warned from self leaning for it builds a wedge between the person and his Lord.
