His Eminence declares the importance of making legislations that support sport and get rid of the old laws that are no longer able to keep up with the rapid development of the sport, since it is not just individual or collective movements but it includes now all the society and it has economic, societal and even political consequences; thus it was called the peoples' union. At the same time, he called on communicating with the legislative authorities to come up with a unified vision about legislation that serve the sports and exploit the youth reality of the community.
