

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakim: The government was unable to conform to the hopes of the Religious Authority and avoiding statements is proof of the Religious Authority's discontent

The last Friday ended with a noticeable political development from the holy Husseini courtyard, silence expressing a stance to the situation, this what the Religious Authority showed by suspending weekly political speeches except for the necessity of current phase and incoming situations. Chairman Supreme Islamic Council in Iraq (SICI) Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakim considered the current stance of the Religious Authority (avoiding statements) as an obvious proof of its discontent, explaining that the government was inching reformations and was unable to conform to the Religious Authority's hopes, noting that the Religious Authority is only seeking to provide advice and to care for the public interest and have no selfinterest.
