

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem: young people's political role must be consistent with population size; at Euphrates Scout Forum

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, head of the National State Powers Alliance, stressed the importance of investing in this age group and the rush of young people to achieve what serves Iraq and its people, indicating that scouts are future leaders. in the forum of Euphrates Scouts Training on June 30, 2021.

His Eminence called to adhere to the prophetic patriotic reform project and define its dimensions and introduce it to people.

His Eminence indicated that the current stage needs the youth's vigor, and they must have a role in the change equation that goes in line with their demographic significance, stressing adherence to institutional work, as it guarantees the perpetuation of positive outcomes without it relying on the presence or absence of a person, while calling on the scouts to compete and race for good deeds and what serves the country and the people.

His Eminence said that the forthcoming general elections are pivotal because they put Iraq at a crossroads, stressing the importance of influencing and stabilizing positions to support those qualified to serve their country, as a strong Iraq needs strong campaigners of influential projects.