

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem calls Foreign Affairs Ministry to show true Iraq's face

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, head of the National State Powers Alliance, called the Ministry of Interior and its embassies and consulates to work on showing the true face of Iraq.

His Eminence tweeted on Wednesday, November 24, 2021: "The anniversary of the Iraqi Diplomacy Day and the celebration of nearly a century since the establishment of the first Iraqi Foreign Ministry in 1924. Our country, the region, and the world are invaded by waves of crises and disputes and a series of political, security, economic and cultural precursors. The new era of our young democratic experience requires consideration and to handle what surrounds us regionally and internationally objectively. We rely on our diplomatic effort, represented by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and our embassies and consulates abroad, to work on showing the true face of Iraq."

His Eminence showed the importance of their contribution to draw the features of the policy of openness with brotherly and friendly countries that are based on mutual interests and common relations in a manner that preserves Iraqi sovereignty, and for Iraq to be a bridge of communication and sympathy and a link between the factions in the region and the world.
