His Eminence said that the Coalition of State Administration was formed to be a gathering of the main powers in the country, and it is one of the outcomes of the national dialogue that was under the patronage of the Prime Minister, where the participating powers signed a document in which they defined the features of the state administration in the next stage and the road map for managing the country, noting that the invitation is extended to all, including the brothers in the Sadrist movement, many invitations were directed to them. The Sadrist movement is an essential partner and the coordination framework was open to the Sadrist brothers we were among the first to object to the resignation of their deputies, adding, "We sent more than one message to His Eminence Al-Sadr to reverse it, and we launched another message through a broad public program."

About the recent elections, His Eminence said:

"The recent elections were marred by many observations, including serious observations, and appeals were submitted in substantial cases to the Commission and the Federal Court, but the framework powers blessed the ratification of the results and congratulated the winners, in their commitment to the principles of democracy and the preservation of civil peace," referring to the status of Al-Hikma National Movement "and about our situation in Al-Hikma, we are reviewing our internal conditions and we are preparing for the upcoming electoral exercise.

His Eminence expressed his pride in converging the views of the political parties, indicating that he based this on his political and social history, his vision and good relations with everyone, and his ability to provide solutions more than describing the problem.

His Eminence added, "The brothers in the Sadrist movement did not respond to the framework's calls for dialogue, and we do not have a clear vision of what the Sadrist movement wants, and we have not heard an official objection from them about the nomination of Brother Mohammed Shia'a Al-Sudani to head the next government, other than media statements."

Regarding the early elections, His Eminence said:

"Most of the framework powers and other national powers are unwilling to hold early elections, but the withdrawal of the Sadrist brothers made them go to demand early elections after forming a strong government with full powers, approving the budget, amending the electoral law, and changing the commission," expressing his keenness to communicate with Sayyid Al-Sadr, adding, "If there is an interest With my visit to His Eminence, I will spare no effort to invest all possibilities to bring our views closer, and we view Sayyid Al-Sadr as a brother and a close friend, with whom we have with an affiliation to the holy city of Najaf, scientific families and ties of kinship."

His Eminence expressed his regret over what happened in the Green Zone, and the thing that calls for optimism is the speed of encircling the crisis and Sayyid Al-Sadr's call to his followers to adhere to peace. All of this is evidence of everyone's desire not to escalate or repeat the scene, indicating that Al-Kadhimi's government succeeded in calming the Iraqi street and establishing balanced relations with everyone, openness regionally and internationally, and convergence of views between the parties in the region.

Regarding his meeting with the Saudi Crown Prince, His Eminence said that the meeting was in depth without a limit for time or frankness, and H.E. discussed the interrelationships between Iraq and the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, adding: "And we found from His Highness the desire, love, and openness to the Iraqi reality, and we said about the importance of integration between the Iraqi and Saudi strengths in the service of Arab and Muslim issues."

There is no solution except through dialogue."
