Illustrating that the devil sugarcoats sins, while humans use guidance and advice, affirming that real power lies within Allah Almighty, and indicating that some want the power to achieve the religion and project of Allah.

H.E. indicated that the righteous human will look at power as an inability at the same time compared to Allah's power and knowledge, illustrating that if power transitioned to arrogance, it would become an illness to its owner. H.E. differentiated between good powers that serve the divine project such as believing that true power belongs to Allah Almighty and that all possibilities are a method to reach perfection, within Allah's limits, and a reason for man to become humble, not a reason to transgress on others
