

Sayyid Ammar al-Hakim stresses the necessity of pacifying and the employing of dialogue as the means to get out of the current political crisis

Sayyid Ammar al-Hakim has stressed the necessity of pacifying and accepting the judgment of the constitution as well as the consensus that agree with it in order to get out of the current political crisis, explaining that the ambition of all citizens of the Iraqi people is to get out of this crisis and to stick to the national unity. He emphasized the importance of sustaining an alliance and a relationship between the National Alliance and the rest of blocs and to disseminate the message of brotherhood and love among the Iraqi components so Iraq may be recognized on the regional and global levels as the head of the Arab Summit.

This came up during the meeting between His Eminence and the head of the ministerial council, Mr. Nouri al-Maliki, and with Dr. Ibrahim al-Jaafari, head of the National Alliance, at the Baghdad office of His Eminence on Tuesday, March 12, 2013.

Those gathered discussed the developments of the political process in Iraq and the affairs of the National Alliance, stressing at the same time the necessity of activating the task of the five-member committee in the National Alliance and its communication with the other political forces. Those gathered stressed the activating of the ministerial committee for addressing the demonstrators' legitimate demands according to the constitution, emphasizing the importance of safeguarding the Iraqi national unity.
