

Sayyid Ammar al-Hakim Stresses the Importance of the Administrative Revolution to Make a Radical Change to the Services Offered to the Citizens

Sayyid Ammar al-Hakim, head of the Islamic Supreme Council of Iraq, stressed the importance of creating a global administrative revolution that kills the routine and the monotony and makes a radical change to the services offered to the country and the citizens, explaining that the administrative reforms are useless and what the institutions need is a real administrative revolution. Here he pointed out to the importance of forming a harmonious competent team armed with the well-defined vision and plan. This came during a meeting between his Eminence and a number of artists, athletes and leaders of tribes held in his office in Baghdad on Thursday, April 10, 2014. His Eminence said the partnership means to share everything, i.e. achievements and failures: The achievements cannot be credited to some while the others are blamed for the failures under the pretext that those are responsible for the impediment of work. Thus his Eminence called for a wide and conscious participation in the elections and for choosing the best and turning for it, reminding that the choice of the best is the call of the religious marja and that the Citizen Coalition has the integral platform to rule the country.
