

Sayyid Ammar al-Hakim Says to the Deputy National Security Advisor: The ISIS Constitutes a Danger not only to Iraq, but also to the World Security and Peace

Sayyid Ammar al-Hakim, head of the Islamic Supreme Council of Iraq, said the ISIS constitutes a danger not only to Iraq, but also to the world security and peace, stressing the importance of facing the ISIS with too much seriousness.

This came during a meeting held between his Eminence, on October 14, 2014 at his office in Baghdad, and the deputy national security advisor, Tony Blinken.

His Eminence called on the Arab tribes and clans of the western regions to play their role in countering the ISIS gangs.
