

During His Visit to the Camp for Displaced Families in Samarra, Sayyid Ammar Al Hakim Calls for Making Efforts at the Security, Social, Developmental and Political Levels to Enhance the Unity of Iraqis

Sayyid Ammar Al Hakim, head of the Islamic Supreme Council of Iraq, called for security, social, developmental and political efforts, as well as for establishing a reassuring environment for all Iraqis. His eminence explained that the integration of these four elements can achieve the required coexistence between Iraqis, solve the problems and develop the cities so that Iraqis live in security and peace. He stressed the need to make complementary efforts to ensure the return displaced citizens to their homes in the freed regions safe and sound as quick as possible after the removal of mines and explosives and the restoration of water and power services.

This came during Sayyid Ammar Al Hakim's visit to the relief camp for families displaced from the regions of Saladin to Samarra district on Thursday, March 12, 2015.

His eminence affirmed that real happiness is achieved when the displaced return to their home and lead a normal life in security and stability, praising the efforts of camp officials aiming to provide services to these honorable families and relieve their troubles and problems.
